Soul Fire* combines theatre, music, and movement to depict the spiritual and physical voyages of San Diego immigrants

Soul Fire shares the stories of San Diegans who immigrated from Afghanistan, Iraq, Somalia, Sudan, Vietnam, China, Haiti, and Poland. Playwright Lisa Kirazian wove together over a dozen interviews to create Soul Fire, which was originally produced in 2004 as a collaboration between Playwrights Project and San Diego Public Library. A brief talkback follows each performance.

This inaugural production of Playwrights Project's Mosaic program, which features professional productions of plays drawn from underserved communities. Mosaic honors the spirit of Mo'olelo Performing Arts Company and the generosity of Mo'olelo supporters, who supported Mo'olelo's work before it closed its doors.
